

Nichelle M. Hayes MPA, MLS is the leader of the Center for Black Literature & Culture (CBLC), Indianapolis Public Library. The website is www.indypl.org/cblc . Hayes graduated from Indiana University – School of Library & Information Science (SLIS) with her MLS. She has two other degrees from Valdosta State University.

She is actively involved in her community with many organizations including her church.

She is a blogger at <https://thetiesthatbind.blog/> where she discusses genealogy and keeping families connected. Her passion of history began in grade school when she read, “I Buried My Heart At Wounded Knee”. She is a 3rd generation Indianapolis native. She currently lives in the city of her birth with her husband. She also has two grown children.