

Derrick P. Alridge is Professor of Education and an affiliate faculty member in the Carter G. Woodson Institute for African-American and African Studies at the University of Virginia (UVA). He is the author of The Educational Thought of W.E.B. Du Bois: An Intellectual History and co-editor of Message in the Music: Hip-Hop, History, and Pedagogy. He is currently writing The Hip-Hop Mind: Ideas, History, and Social Consciousness (University of Wisconsin Press) and is the leading co-editor of The Black Intellectual Tradition in the United States in the Twentieth Century (forthcoming in 2020 with the University of Illinois Press).

At UVA, Alridge leads three major research projects, which include work as the Principal Investigator of the Teachers in the Movement Project; Director of the Center for Race and Public Education in the South; and Principal Investigator of the Carter G. Woodson Home National Historic Site – Ethnographic Resource Study with the National Park Service.

Professor Alridge is a proud lifetime member of the Association for the Study of African American Life and History and serves as an associate editor for the Association's Journal of African American History.