Erica Armstrong Dunbar, PhD, is the Charles and Mary Beard Distinguished Professor of History at Rutgers University. She currently serves as the national director of the Association of Black Women Historians, the only professional organization focused on Black women's history. Dunbar's first book, A Fragile Freedom: African American Women and Emancipation in the Antebellum City, was published by Yale University in 2008. Her second book, Never Caught: The Washingtons' Relentless Pursuit of Their Runaway Slave, Ona Judge (Simon & Schuster) was a finalist for the National Book Award in nonfiction and a winner of the 2018 Frederick Douglass Book Prize. The young readers' version of Never Caught (Aladdin/Simon and Schuster) was published in January 2019. Later that same year, Dunbar published She Came To Slay: The Life and Times of Harriet Tubman, an accessible biography of one of the most remarkable social activists of the nineteenth century.
