

ALICIA L. MOORE

MARY MCLEOD BETHUNE SERVICE AWARD

Dr. Alicia Moore, is a Cargill Endowed Associate Professor of Education at Southwestern University in Georgetown, Texas. She is also an Austin, Texas native. Dr. Moore received her Bachelor's degree in Elementary Education from Huston-Tillotson College (now University), and received both her Master's degree and a Doctorate in Multicultural Special Education from The University of Texas at Austin. For 20 years, Dr. Moore has been a co-editor of The Black History Bulletin which is published by the Association for the Study of African American Life and History, and is the second oldest academic journal dedicated to the education of African Americans and recognized as a leading publication in this field. She has been recognized and won numerous awards for her scholarship, teaching, and advocacy. Dr. Moore has authored numerous peer-reviewed articles and several books to her credit. Dr. Moore is a Life Member of the Association for the Study of African-American Life and History (ASALH), a Life member of the National Association for the Education of Young Children, is a proud and active Life member of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc., and is a member of the Links, Incorporated. She is married to Mr. Gary Hopkins.